

LEADERSHIP TEAM HEALTH CHECK

Where does your team really stand?

Most leaders assume their top team is more aligned than it is. This five-minute check gives you an honest read across the five things that make or break a leadership team — and the one place to start.

HOW IT WORKS

1. 15 statements, rate 1–5
2. Score five dimensions
3. Find your weakest link
4. Get the first move

THE CHECK

Rate each statement 1 to 5

Answer as your team actually behaves, not as you wish it did. Be honest — the value is in the low scores. Circle a number for each.

1 = Strongly disagree · 3 = Sometimes · 5 = Strongly agree Keep a running total for each lettered group.

A • Trust & safety

People on this team admit mistakes and weaknesses without spinning them.

1 2 3 4 5

We ask each other for help and it's seen as normal, not weakness.

1 2 3 4 5

People speak up about problems even when it's uncomfortable.

1 2 3 4 5

B • Healthy conflict

We debate ideas openly rather than going quiet and deciding in the hallway.

1 2 3 4 5

Disagreement is about the issue, not personal.

1 2 3 4 5

The quietest people in the room actually get heard.

1 2 3 4 5

C • Alignment & commitment

Everyone can state our top 2–3 priorities the same way.

1 2 3 4 5

Once we decide, people commit — even those who disagreed.

1 2 3 4 5

We leave meetings clear on who owns what.

1 2 3 4 5

D • Accountability

Peers call each other out on missed commitments — not just the boss.

1 2 3 4 5

Low performance gets addressed, not tolerated.

1 2 3 4 5

Standards are the same for everyone, including the most senior.

1 2 3 4 5

E • Results over ego

People put the team's result above their own function or status.

YOUR SCORE

Add it up

Total each group (max 15), then add the five for an overall score out of 75. Your lowest group is your starting point — that's the constraint holding the rest back.

DIMENSION	YOUR TOTAL	MAX
A · Trust & safety		15
B · Healthy conflict		15
C · Alignment & commitment		15
D · Accountability		15
E · Results over ego		15
Overall		75

What your overall score means

Strong

60–75

A healthy, high-trust team. Protect it — this is fragile under growth, reorgs and new members. Use offsites to stress-test strategy, not to repair.

Emerging

45–59

The foundation is there but inconsistent — usually strong on one or two dimensions and thin on the rest. Targeted work on your lowest dimension pays off fast.

At risk

Below 45

Real friction is costing you speed and talent. This rarely fixes itself with a strategy day — it needs deliberate work on trust and how the team operates.

Your first move, by weakest dimension

Trust → Start with vulnerability at the top: the most senior person goes first in admitting a miss.

Conflict → Name your team's "hallway conversations" and pull one into the room this week.

Accountability → Agree one shared metric the whole team owns together, not by function.

Results/ego → Change what you celebrate: reward the collective win louder than the individual one.

Alignment → Have each person write the top 3 priorities privately, then compare. The gaps are the work.

NOW DO IT WITH THE WHOLE TEAM

The real insight is in the gaps between your scores.

Have every leader take this independently, then compare. Where you disagree most is where the work is. Our executive programs — including the Team LFS leadership simulation — are built to close exactly those gaps, on the human side where they actually live.
